

Says

Thinks

Agriculture is known as the "Backbone of India".

The Indian Economy is called as agro-economy.

India is among the top three global producers of many crops

Price volatility causes instability of farmer's income.

Lack of marketing and storage facilities.

Unpredicted climate change affects crops production.

India's crop production analysis

Providing raw materials to many Industries.

Agriculture contributes over 40% of the total GDP of the country.

Employment to more than 70% of people.

Need for price stabilisation

Inadequate use of efficient farm equipments.

High indebtedness of the farmers.

Does

Feels

